Friday Morning

Ripples: Exploring Ethical Issues Raised By the Hoffman Report and its Aftermath

Marty Amerikaner, PhD, with Jack Berkley, PsyD, Patrick Kerr, PhD, John Linton, PhD, ABPP

Level: Intermediate (3.0 CE)

Two years ago APA hired former federal prosecutor David Hoffman to investigate a series of long-standing allegations of impropriety within the national organization tied to policies and practices associated with psychologists working within national security sites. Hoffman issued his report early last year, in which he reached several conclusions that sent shock waves through the psychology community, and led to resignations and terminations at the highest level of the APA. In the wake of the Hoffman report, APA's Council of Representatives (COR) passed new policy resolutions significantly changing the permissible role of psychologists in security related settings and requesting modifications to the APA ethics code and the operations of the ethics office. In this program, panelists will present and discuss a variety of ethical and practice issues associated with the Hoffman report and its repercussions.

Please read through the Hoffman report executive summary (<http://www.apa.org/independent-review/revised-report.pdf>) and related materials associated with APA's actions (<http://www.apa.org/independent-review/index.aspx>).

Objectives:

Participants will be able to:

1. Identify ethical principles and standards of professional behavior to which the Hoffman report draws attention.
2. Discuss contrasting ethical arguments concerning key elements of the process used by Mr. Hoffman, the data upon which his conclusions were based, and the conclusions that he reached
3. Discuss APA actions in the wake of the report and reactions of other individuals and groups to those actions in terms of ethical principles, professional values and standards of behavior.

Friday Afternoon

Supervision: A Refresher Course

Jeffrey Hammond, PhD, with Jeff Harlow, PhD, and Kerri Linton, MA

Level: Novice (3.0 CE)

This workshop is designed for all skill levels. The presentation will focus upon the supervisory relationship, Board requirements, ethical issues and best practices in supervision. This workshop will explore all aspects of Psychology Licensure in West Virginia, and will include panel discussions, role play and question and answer opportunities. All supervisors and supervisees are encouraged to attend.

Participants will be able to:

- List at least two common areas of concern presented by supervising psychologists in West Virginia.
- Specify at least one area of development in their supervisory/supervisee relationship.
- List two aspects of supervisee' role in their Supervision Contract.
